

Maria A. Levi-Minzi (M.A. Mental Health Counseling, Boston College, 2007) is a Senior Research Associate at the Center for Applied Research on Substance Use and Health Disparities at Nova Southeastern University. She has extensive fieldwork experience, serving as Project Manager on two NIDA-funded research projects: Diversion of Antiretroviral Medications to Street Markets (1R01DA023157) and Understanding the Scope and Magnitude of Prescription Drug Diversion (1R01DA021330) and through conducting pilot research for future Center projects. A current collaborator with Center investigators and staff on the preparation of new research programs and the presentation and publication of study findings, Mrs. Levi-Minzi has extensive clinical experience working with families, the chronically mentally ill and trauma survivors. Her work as an advocate, educator and community liaison in the areas of domestic violence and sexual assault led to the development of educational and training materials for youth, teen and adult populations. A Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Family Therapy at Nova Southeastern University, Mrs. Levi-Minzi's major research interests encompass the application systemic perspectives to substance abuse, victimization, and major mental illness and social justice for marginalized populations.
